Steve Marsee posted:

I met Arnie when I started Law school at the University of Miami in 1997. I had gotten a job selling Timeshare in Aventura where he was the general manager. when I realized that I could not work full-time and pass at Law School, the other GM said too bad I had to choose one. Arnie stood up to him and told him I could work weekends. He even made me a manager. Thanks to Arnie believing in me, I finished Law School and practice in Orlando. I loved Arnie for his doing that and guiding me towards success. On the outside he appeared to be hard, and tough but in reality he was a kind and gentle soul whose compassion touched many lives besides mine. God certainly got another Angel when Arnie went home. Arnold Mann was a role model for me back when we were growing up in Brooklyn. He was a star football player at Lincoln High School and went on to success in both football and basketball at Western Maryland College from which he earned a BA degree. Our parents were lifelong friends. His father Herman was a prince among men. His mother Jean was one of a kind. As long as I live his memory will as well. Stephen Trachtenberg
