My father was a mentor to all us and others. He never said no If it involved a learning event, sport or new challenge. He would laugh when my brother would take parts off my mother's new car for his own, with my ma screaming in the background. My father enjoyed driving with no purpose but to cruise the highway. Every time he bought a new car there would be a road trip. We were all glad when cars lasted longer than a couple of years.He loved my mother endlessly. After high school , i spent part of the summer backpacking Europe. When i arrived in Detroit at the airport, no one came to pick me up, wtf. When i cabbed home i was in shock to see an above ground pool in the backyard and my mother soaking a broken foot from a fall while visiting London. My dad refused to let her suffer or take a season to build an in ground pool when she needed it now. That is who he was. He never stopped moving. He volunteered for anything and everything. He was busy with his dental buddies, synagogue buddies, and zionist buddies, raising money and Israel bonds. How many father's would spend the time to build Heathkits for radio's photocells, etc. let us turn the garage into an auto shop for the neighborhood. That was my dad. He is my hero, miss u always. Somewhere there is an ancient 8 millimeter movie clip of the Lechner kids pushing Jerry's classic sports car. The MG (if memory serves) is in park. Very young Ron and Chuck have no chance of actually moving the small auto. Suddenly it begins to roll back into the street. The filming abruptly ends as a no doubt frantic Jerry scrambles to avert a wreck. Doc Lechner though was always cool, generous and quick to share a polished wit. The last of a great generation.

I am so fortunate to have had Jerry as my father-in-law; what a wonderful man he was. He defines the true meaning of love, kindness and devotion. His heart was golden. I remember every time we saw him, he would always say, "Howdy doody!" or "Howda ya do?" I find myself saying that from time to time! He cherished Florence so much. He would always say, "As long as I am with her, I am happy." He loved her so much. I will miss him forever.

My dad was my hero, my role model. Actually, he was for all of his children because we all went into dentistry. But my dad used me as his guinea pig for orthodontics. I was one of his first patients with braces at 11 years old and it hurt so much. Back then braces were pounded into each tooth. It was awful! But years later, I followed his footsteps to provide many many children with great smiles and treating with less painful and newer techniques available, He always chided me after that how I was such a horrible orthodontic patient, that it was ironic that's what I ended up with as a career.

My family's thoughts are with the Lechner family. I remember Dr. Lechner in his prime, in all the years in Southfield Gardens when I would come by and visit Ron. All prayers and condolences. Steve Klinsky and family
