My deepest sympathy and prayers to Barry Shipman's family I've known Barry for 47 years through his profession. He was a dedicated maxillofacial prosthodontist who cared for and treated in the high hundreds of patients who had the unfortunate situation of an oral and/or facial deformity or dysfunction from birth defect, head and neck cancer or trauma. Barry was probably one of only a handful of dentists in the USA who choose his whole long career to help these patients return to society with a decent quality of life. Barry was kind and never complained about the inequities dealt to his patients. He was involved for decades in the American Academy of Maxillofacial Prosthodontics and served on numerous committees year after year- as a prominent leader and contributor to the literature. He was continuously involved in new rehabilitation techniques. He was cordial and thoughtful to everyone, and I am confident of his dedication and his energy to improving all his patient's lives in some way. Barry was a real "mench". He will surely be missed, however his kindness and consideration for others will remain. Again, my deepest sympathy for his family. His friend and colleague, Ian Zlotolow

As a Hobert College classmate (H '64) we shared many pre-med classes, good times with Lacrosse stix on the quad, ski trips and bull sessions, since he roomed across the hall from me. He surprised, me when I was a 2nd year Med student at Tufts when he showed up there during the following year in a long white lab coat for Anatomy class as a first year student in the Dental School. Although our professional training and practice, and geography separated us, we both felt excited when we would occasionally talk on the phone. I was greatly saddened to hear of his passing this morning. His personality was so big, that I truly feel a sense of loss despite the years and distance of our friendship. Stephen G. Gerzof, MD FACR
